DIZZY DUNLOP

"The first craft ashore was the schooner Dizzy Dunlop, 95 tons register, bound from Carnarvon to Kiel with a cargo of slates. She went on to the ledge about 700 yards from the cliff about 3.30 p.m., and her dangerous position was soon known to the coastguards in the immediate locality. It being low tide Chief Officer Buick had a boat launched, and succeeded with his men in reaching the vessel's side. It was blowing freshly from the west at the time. Three seamen on board the Dizzy Dunlop availed themselves of the services of the boat to reach the shore, but the owner (Williams) and the sailing master (Humphries) refused to leave the ship.....Aided by the direction of the wind they at last, however managed to get alongside-it was now after ten o'clock-and the owner and master were taken on board. They were in a very sorry plight, suffering severely from sickness as they were conveyed to the shore."

THE ABERYSTWYTH TIMES, SATURDAY, MAY 8.

went into the house of prisoner. I found twenty-two staves in the pigsty belonging to Elizabeth Owen. She told me that they belonged to prisoner. I went to prisoner's house, and she told me that she had carried them there. She brought me three and said she had only those. I found one in the chimney, and three more under the bed.

I went to the back of the yard, and in an old building there I found fourteen other staves. I found two pieces of lathwood in the backyard. I asked if she had any in the house; at first she said she had not, but afterwards she said she had one barrel which she used for keeping the pig's food in. I then asked her if I should search her house. She said I might. I found three staves hidden under the bed. I also found twenty-five staves inside the pigsty, and these she told me belonged to Margaret Owen.

Elizabeth Owen, wife of a sailor, living at Morfa Bychan, was also charged with stealing twenty-two staves, five barrels, and pieces of lathwood, part of the cargo of the ship Castilian, valued together at about 20s.—Mr M'Culloch said: I identify the twenty-two staves, which I value at 6d. each, and five barrels at 2s. 6d. each.—Superintendent Davies said: On the 19th ult. I found the lost property on the premises of the prisoner—five staves in the pigsty yard, and four of the barrels there also. I asked the prisoner if she had any more, she said she had not. I went to the back of the yard, and in an old building there I found fourteen other staves. I found two pieces of lathwood in the backyard. I asked if she had any in the house; at first she said she had not, but afterwards she said she had one barrel which she used for keeping the pig's food in. I then asked her if I should search her house. She said I might. I found three staves hidden under the bed. I also found twenty-five staves inside the pigsty, and these she told me belonged to Margaret Owen. She said she would give me £2 if I would not say anything about the matter. At first she told me it was her children who carried them there, but afterwards admitted that

William Jones, carrier, of Morfa Bychan, was also charged with stealing five staves and two pieces of timber of the value of 6d. each.—W. M'Culloch said: The pieces produced are a portion of the wreck of the Castilian, and are of the value of about 6d. each.—Superintendent Davies: I found the pieces produced in a garden belonging to defendant, and in his possession.—Defendant said his son, a boy aged eight years, had brought the pieces up from the beach in a little waggon which he had, and had carried them to the garden.—Mr Powell appealed to

she had done so herself.—Prisoner said that her husband was a sailor on board a fishing boat at Pwllheli, that she had three very small children, and that some of the men in charge of the raft had told her she might take the things away, and use the timber as firewood.—Some difficulty was experienced to get the prisoner to plead guilty, in order to bring the matter within the jurisdiction of the Bench, as she was anxious to get the matter settled by the magistrates, but did not consider herself guilty of stealing after being told by the men in charge of the timber that she might take the things away. Ultimately she pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to be imprisoned for seven days.

Margaret Owen, of the same place, was also charged with stealing twenty-eight staves and one piece of lathwood, part of the cargo of the Castilian.—Mr M'Culloch said: I identify twenty-eight staves, discovered on the premises of prisoner, and the one piece of lathwood. I gave no authority to any one to remove them, or give them away.—Superintendent Davies said: On the 19th instant I went into the house of prisoner. I found twenty-two staves in the pigsty belonging to Elizabeth Owen. She told me that they belonged to prisoner. I went to prisoner's house, and she told me that she had carried them there. She brought me three and said she had only those. I found one in the chimney, and three more under the bed. She admitted having taken them. Her husband is away at sea, on the coast of Australia, I believe.—Prisoner said that the men watching had told her that she might carry away as much of the timber as she liked. She pleaded guilty of carrying them away with the permission of the men.—Sentenced to be imprisoned for seven days.

SHIPWRECK ON THE WELSH COAST.

A vessel foundered six miles from Llandudno yesterday, tonnage 60, laden with slate from Portmadoc to Liverpool. The lifeboat went out to Rhyl without seeing any sign of the boat or hands. There is no news as to their being found, and it is feared all have perished. Hundreds of persons witnessed the incident through opera and marine glasses, and watched with great anxiety the departure and progress of the lifeboat along the coast.

4ydd o Orffennaf 1870 (Dundee Courier)

SHIPWRECKS ON THE WELSH COAST.

Early on Monday morning, during a thick fog, the barque Edward O'Brien, of Thomastown, from Mobile, with a cargo of cotton for Liverpool, stranded on Morfa Bychan, Portmadoc. Her cargo was discharged into lighters for conveyance to Liverpool. During the same night the ship Osea, of London, laden with sugar from Bahia, struck on Portmadoc Bank, and sank. She is likely to be raised, but her valuable cargo is useless.

Chwefror 20 1875 (Morperth Herald)

SHIPWRECK OFF PORTMADOC.

A telegram from Portmadoc on Saturday reports that the Spanker, barque, of Glasgow, from Jamacia for Liverpool, got ashore on Friday night on Harlech Beach, close to Portmadoc Bar. The master, steward, boatswain, and boy were drowned; seven men were saved, and landed at Oriccieth by the lifeboat. The vessel is a total wreck.

Chwefror 9fed 1885 (Hartlepool Northern)

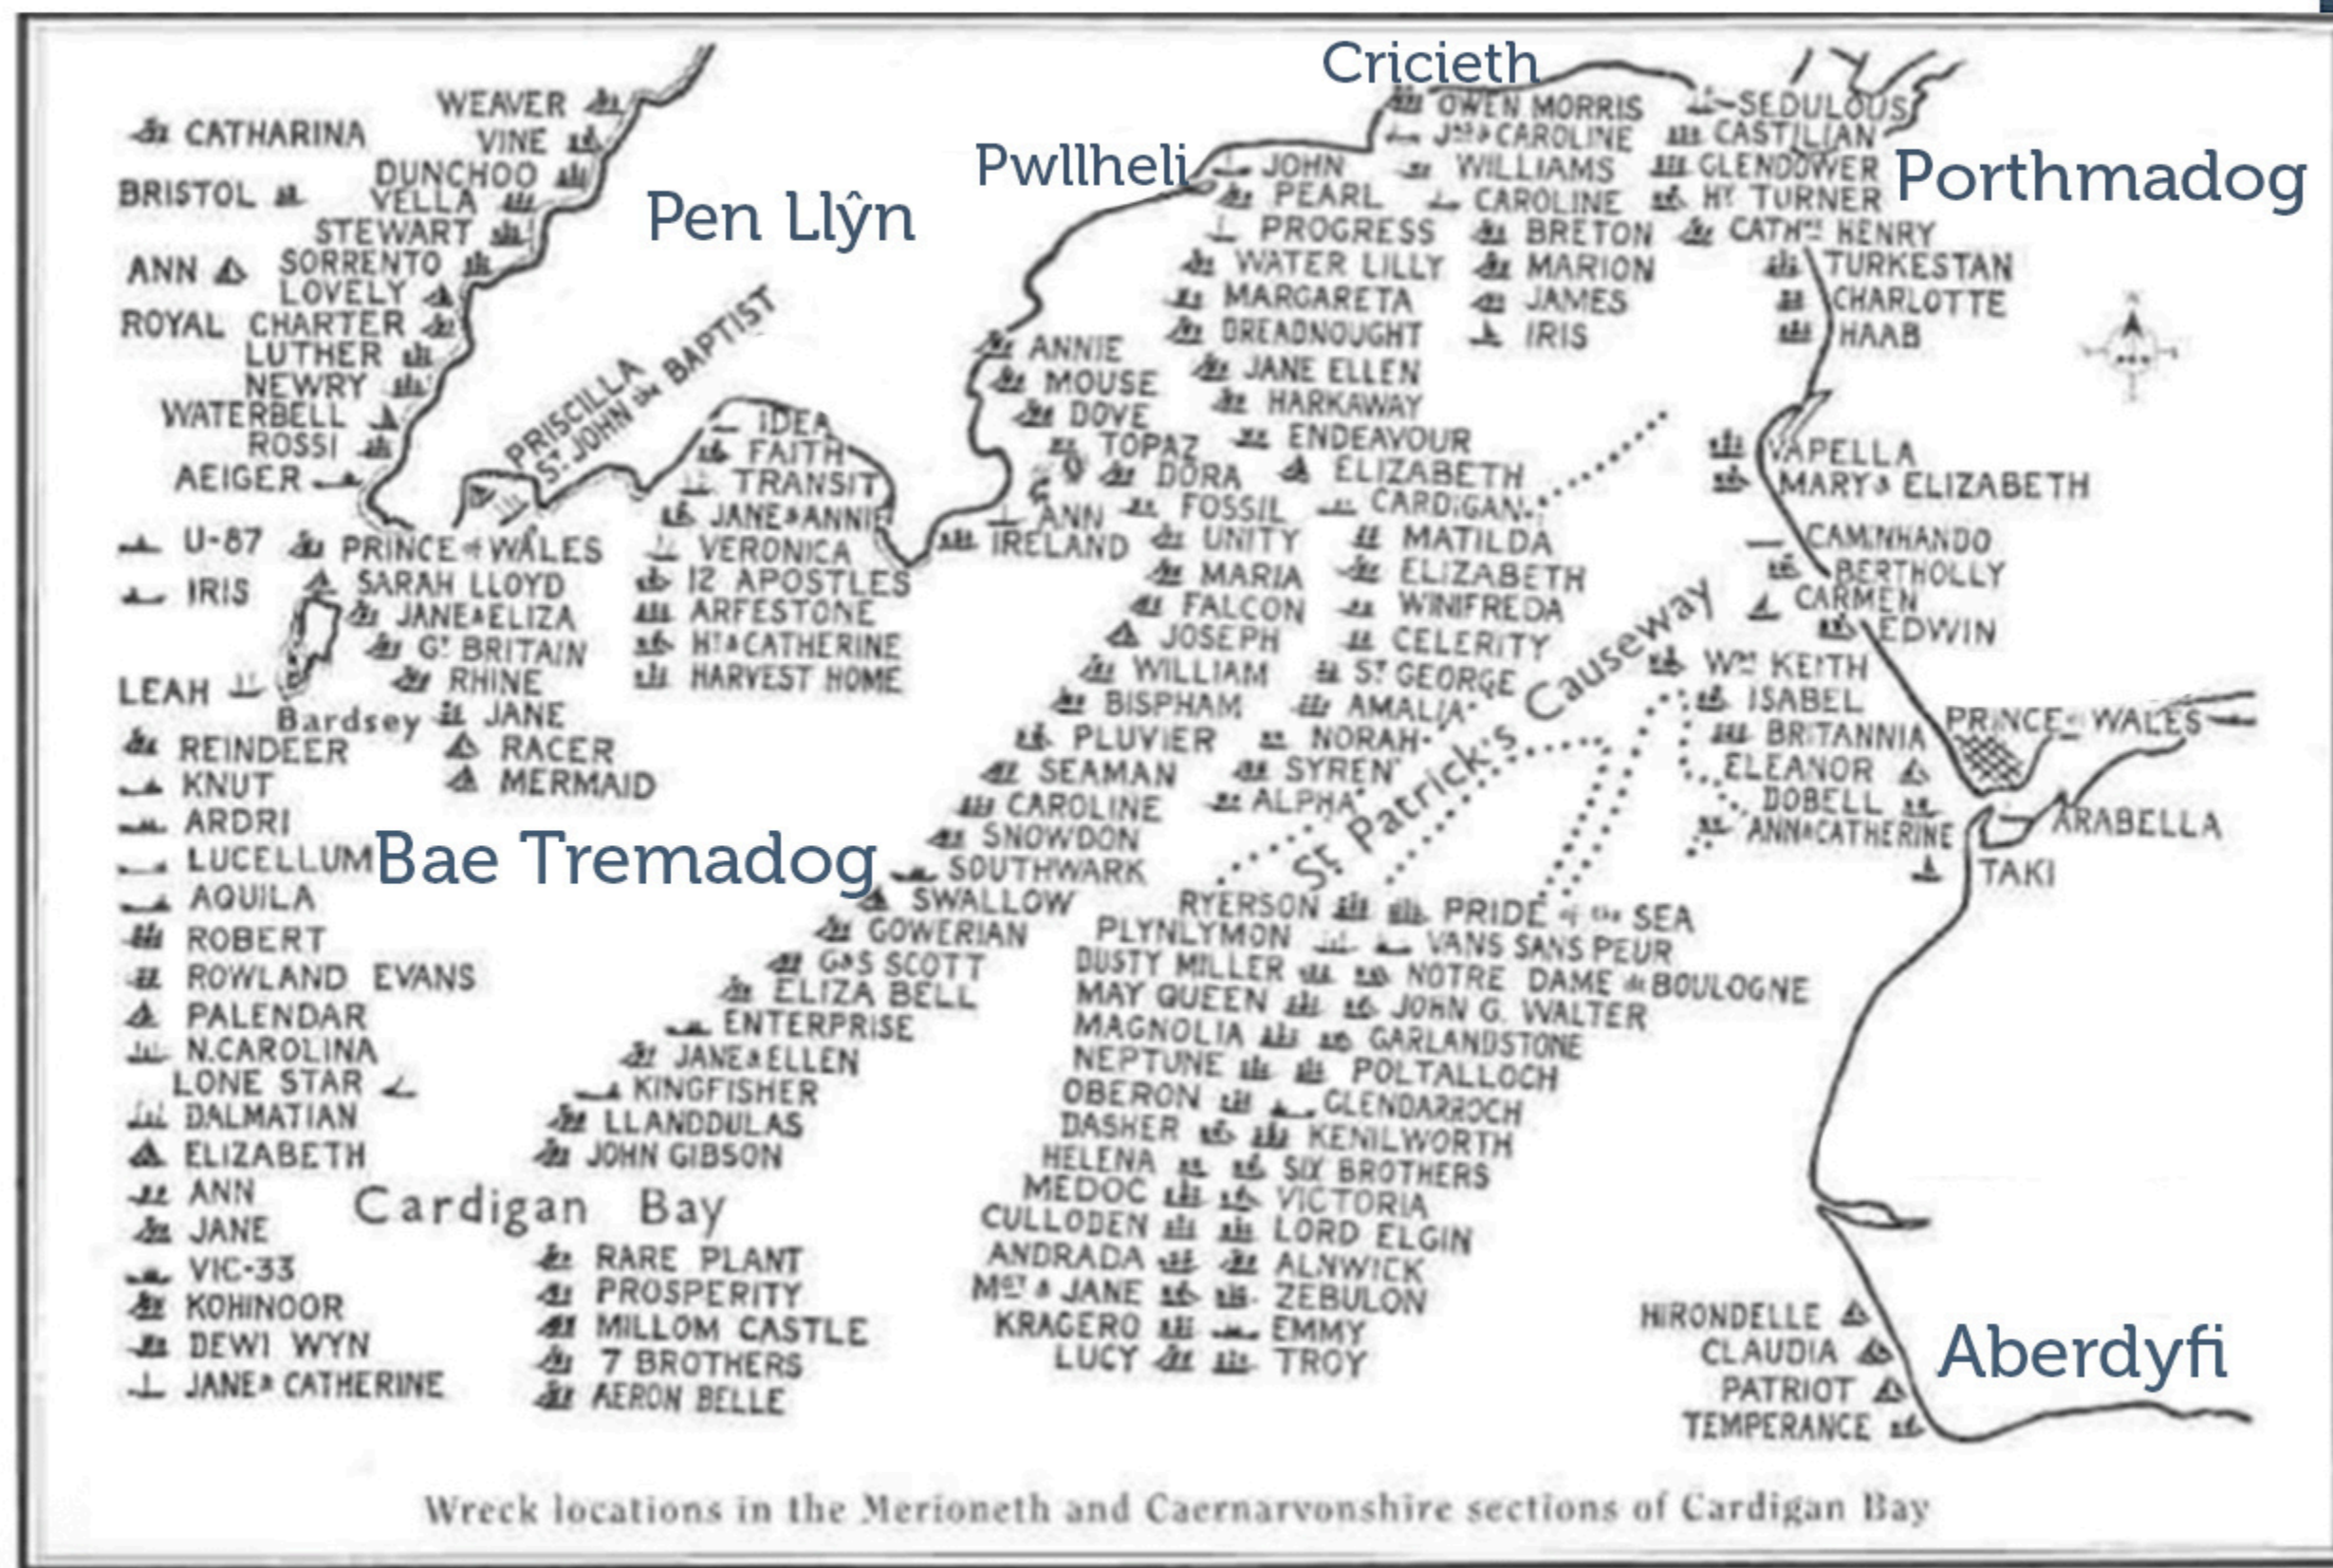

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.—THREE SHIPMASTERS DROWNED.—PORTMADOC, Oct. 22.—On Friday last Captain John Watkins, of the schooner Blue Vein, in company with Captain William Williams, of the smack Eivion, and Captain Richard Jones, of the Linnet, all of this port (Portmadoc), embarked at Cricketh, in the Blue Vein's boat, at 10 o'clock, a.m., with a quantity of stores for Portmadoc. About an hour afterwards, when on the bar, the boat shipped a heavy sea, which engulfed the boat, and Captains Watkins, Williams, and Jones, met with a watery grave. The boat was picked up three hours afterwards. The body of Captain Jones was washed on shore on Sunday. Captain Watkins has left a widow and six young children; Captain Williams, a widow; Captain Jones was a bachelor.—Welsh Paper.
